

Establishment of the College of Reviewers

Leonie Rowan, Parlo Singh and Jeanne Allen

The Asia-Pacific Journal of Teacher Education, and the Australian Teacher Education Association, are strongly committed to the support of high quality, high impact research that makes a significant contribution to the fields associated with teaching and teacher education. Consistent with this agenda we recognize the need to ensure that teacher educators are always and everywhere involved in interrogating the assumptions that underpin our decision making, and the beliefs that guide our actions. Central to this process is the peer review of our research outputs, with rigorous and thoughtful reviews playing a vital role in assuring the legitimacy, integrity and currency of research findings.

While it is easy to recognize that the capacity to engage meaningfully, critically and, of course, respectfully with papers submitted for review is a central requirement for quality reviewers, the amount of work associated with the reviewing process is too easily overlooked. As part of our ongoing commitment to fostering the growth of the profession, and supporting the publication of research of the highest quality, we are pleased to announce the establishment of a College of Reviewers for the Asia-Pacific Journal of Teacher Education. Members of the College of Reviewers are selected on the basis of their involvement in research associated with teacher education, the quality and care of the reviews they provide, and their commitment to the aims and objectives of the Asia-Pacific Journal of Teacher Education, and the Australian Teacher Education Association. We take great pleasure in introducing the first members of our newly established College of Reviewers and thank them for their willingness to take on this important service to their peers, and to the profession.
