Project Proposal for Queensland Government

Graduate Certificate in Auslan Studies

And

Non-Award Certificate in Auslan Studies

1.0 Introduction - Auslan Studies

Using Auslan in teaching Deaf students at all levels has become increasingly emphasised at both state and federal levels. Both policy and practice demand that teachers and support staff have an understanding of Deaf culture and specifically of the use of Auslan for educational purposes. Application of this understanding will ensure that signing Deaf students are supported in their learning and have appropriate levels of access and participation in their learning experiences.

This proposal responds to an enquiry from Clare Grant of the Staff College, Inclusive Education in the Department of Education, Training and the Arts for the provision of the Graduate Certificate in Auslan Studies and non-award Certificate in Auslan Studies to be delivered in Semester two, 2007; Semesters one and two, 2008 and Semester one, 2009 as explained below.

1.1 Graduate Certificate in Auslan Studies

The purpose of the Graduate Certificate is to enable teachers to understand the role of Auslan in communicating with deaf students to further their educational, personal and social development, to provide them with an understanding of Auslan as a community language and to develop foundational competence in using Auslan for instructional and general communicative purposes in educational settings.

On successful completion of the program students may take out the Graduate Certificate and/or apply its 40 CP credit towards the Master of Education or the Master of Special Education. It requires another 40 CP of approved courses to complete either Master's degree. Courses are available on campus and in distance mode.

1.2 Non-Award Certificate in Auslan Studies

The purpose of the non-award Certificate is to enable non-graduates (e.g., teacher aides) to understand the role of Auslan in communicating with deaf students to further their educational, personal and social development, to provide them with an understanding of Auslan as a community language and to develop foundational competence in using Auslan for instructional and general communicative purposes in educational settings.

The content of this Certificate will be essentially the same as the Graduate Certificate but the assessment requirements will be appropriate to the level of the award and will be less than those of the Graduate Certificate.

On successful completion of the program students will be awarded a Griffith University Certificate in Auslan Studies. This Certificate is not formally articulated for credit in further Griffith courses, but the completed studies may be used by the participants for credit applications within bachelors' degree programs at universities. No guarantee of credit is inferred here for specific programs, however.

1.3 Auslan Studies Overview

The new 2007 / 2009 Auslan Studies program at Griffith University will use the experience gained from Auslan 2005 / 2006 and include a number of significant enhancements:

- A revised and specific Graduate Certificate in Auslan Studies at post-graduate level, now consisting of four courses (40CP)
- A revised Certificate in Auslan Studies, non-award, now consisting of four courses (20CP)

- Greater focus on developing receptive and expressive competency in Auslan from the outset of the program and throughout all four courses
- Increased face-to-face delivery mode for those participants in the Brisbane and Gold Coast regions and close monitoring of achievement via enhanced assessment processes for both course content and Auslan competence development.
- Enhanced online delivery of course and tutorial materials; including video-streaming and possible pod-casting and other supportive modes of offer for all students with particular relevance to students in Townsville
- Development of peer mentoring and support procedures, where possible in schools and regions
- Program to be managed by the Centre for Applied Studies in Deafness

The following model outlines the Auslan Studies framework and content and the development activities required to establish and deliver the Auslan Studies 2007 / 2009 program.

An important additional aspect of the 2007 / 2009 program is the proposed parallel research and development project to feed back to the Auslan learning process and its pedagogical outcomes in educational settings. This concurrent research and evaluation program will enable evaluation of the outcomes of the courses in teacher and aide practice in determined education settings in regular and special education contexts.

1.4 Parallel research and development project

It is planned to conduct a concurrent evaluation and research project along with the implementation of the programs and courses of study. This evaluation would have several objectives, including documenting the initial aspirations, attitudes and skills levels of participants and measuring change among these features as studies are attempted and completed. A particular focus will be on the use of Auslan in classrooms and other school settings and how pedagogy and communication patterns may change with the introduction of this bilingual element into the school curriculum.

This would involve the use of reflective diaries, classroom observations, interviews, focus groups and informal and formal instruments to observe and measure Auslan proficiency. This important aspect of the project would provide ongoing and timely feedback into the program and also summative data and conclusions about the outcomes of the project at each stage. These would be reported to the contractor and in professional literature, as agreed by both parties.

2.0 Getting Started - Auslan Studies Critical Timeline

3.0 Budget

The Graduate Certificate and non-award Certificate program budget is in three parts as requested:

Stage One

3.1 Program development

3.2 Auslan Studies stage 1 – Semesters 2 – 2007 and 1 – 2008

Stage Two

3.3 Auslan Studies stage 2 – Semesters 2 – 2008 and 1 – 2009

3.4 Budget summary

3.1 Program Development

Program development involves review and modification of existing resources; creation of new resources; development of multimedia applications; development of detailed course content and associated course outlines.

4.0 Project Personnel

Professor Merv Hyde AM PhD

Director, Centre for Applied Studies in Deafness

Professor Hyde is an internationally experienced and recognised researcher and teacher in the field of deaf education. He is a reviewer for the Editorial Boards of the American Annals of the Deaf, The Journal of Deaf Studies and Deaf Education, and Deafness and Education International. He has conducted reviews of literature and practice for the World Bank and for many governments, schools, colleges and universities.

He is highly published in the field of deaf education in journal and books and has recent, extensive experience in working in Scandinavian countries where instruction in sign languages and development of the sign language competence of teachers and parents are major features of their programs. With Professor Power, he conducted the first and only population study of the use of sign language by Deaf people in Australia. This study was most influential in the development of the National Language Policy and many associated research, resource and staff development programs in Australia. Professor Hyde was made a Member of the Order of Australia for his services to deafness.

Emeritus Professor Des Power AM PhD

Professor Power is a widely experienced researcher in matters to do with deafness, language, and communication, especially as regards the teaching and learning of language. He has used both print sources and the internet to seek and collate material for review reports on a number of issues in this field. He has written many reports and papers on this research for both government and non-government bodies and scholarly publications.

He had major input to the discussion of Auslan in the National Language Policy and has done much to make the community aware of Auslan's use in the Deaf community. He has produced audiovisual materials and assessment tasks which will be of value to the project. He has extensive contacts in the Deaf community and among scholars in the field of deafness and communication who can be drawn on for information and comment. Professor Power was made a Member of the Order of Australia for his services to deafness.
